The Poet of Mani.

For sat for many an hour, and puzzled my poor head, When I englit to have been at work, or fast saleep in bed, But my cornel has come at last, for I can hear them all say. He is the Past of Mani, the best one of them all.

Per used up quires of paper, I've pressed my weary brow, But the words they would not come, as quick as they do now, But the weary nights are o'er, for the critics great and small Say, I'm the Post of Mani, the best one of them all.

I've often sat for hours, long into the weary night, I've walked the ionely road, under the moonlight bright, But now that is pust and gone, the Muse she comes at my call, And my friends they all tell me, I'm the best Port of them all.,

No doubt you have read my hast, and think it very clever, I had to use a name, out of my favorite author Lever; I believe it is my best, it's called the Belle of the Ball, And now I'm the Byron of Mani, the best Post of them all. WEST MAUL.

Special Foreign Correspondence.

ISLAND OF KAULA, Novembur, 1867. MR. COMMERSHAL EDITOR :- I received by the hat male another letter from mi cuzzin in Washinton. In the fast part of that yere letter the Kurnel tells me confidenshally about some big old times what they had lately at the White House about gitting Stanton out of orfice, and how late they bin up o nights, and how many bottles it took, and who got tight, etc., but that's nether here nor thar, and don't consarn you; so I inclose you tother bulance of my cuzzin's letter, and remain allers truly yourn, J. Surru, D. J.,

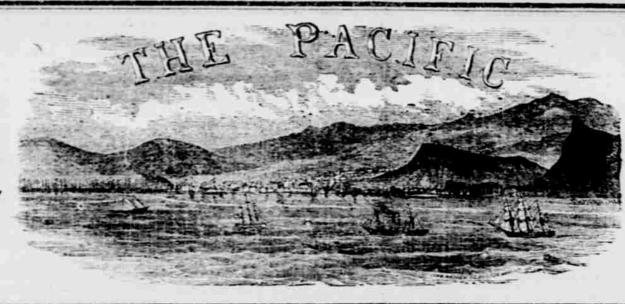

(Which is Deestrick Jedge of Kaula, in perspektiv, lately Constitute, Jestice Prase, a.c., in the Stait o Texas.) P. S .- I sent that last letter of mi cuzzin's to him to Washinton in print, and he telegraphs me word that hisself and the Dook is mity well pleased at it.

> WASHINGTON, DEESTRICK KOLUMBIA, August, 1867.

Deer Cuz:- saysi, that you and me can come to a private underyour Hiness, that's muty good stuf, as good as standing about it. It was like as ef a bumshel any we have at the White House, but I think you ar mity sly about takin it. Ef I hadn't trickt raally spected to see an exploshun, and we all sent you, I reckon I shouldn't have any casion to to Davy Jones' lockker. I could see that Uncle wipe my mouth now. Kurnel, says he, I'm bliged Welles was mity riled up about a sassy little ento do a good many things on the sli. It's as voi imperdently askin him what buzines we have Jeasy the as falling off a chunk, of you get onet to send our ships where somever we like. The Commission Merchant and General Shipping Agent, used to it. I am, says he. So wile we was a sekretary riled up instanter, drawed hisself rite talking, in cum a big strappin nigger, and laid back in his chare, run both hands up into his the Dook's soard of Stait on a chare. Saysi, I long white locks, as he allers does when his danperceeve your Hiness is keeping cullerd survents. der is up, and says he, our intenshuns is the best O, says he smiling all over, Kurnel, that's noth- in the world, but what buzines is that to you? ing noo to me. Im putty well used to cullerd We nede thar two gunbotes insted of one, and I pursons to home. Them's mity handy and useful folks, ef a man only nose how to handle em. I do, and I nose how to handle them, as likewise all they's got, and it made me a dook and a stromary we are on the most friendly terms with your guvenvoi. As to this ere nigger, when I meet Sum- ernment, and it is very strange that your guvernner I calls him my friend and tucks him under the mentarm; and when I meet Johnson, I givs him a kick on his shins on the sli. I'm bound to make cul- erable in the backline, cutting old Welles quite lerd pussons serve me. Bymby he tuck up his short off, I'm the guvernment. I want you to unsoard and showed it to me. Says he, Kurnel, how do you like my sourd? I think it's as good as Ginral Grant's. Saysi, better; its much cleaner. ax no questions, but when you send a gunbote to Says he, that same soard cost me a deal of bother. When I ordered them soards of a ticket, our Minister of Interior insisted that hisen should be looks suspeechious of sinisterous intenshuns, and medy the same as mine, and we cum mity ni that ere gunbote of yourn has bin the occashen unto having a fite about it, but after all mine is for my great anxiety to come pussonally to Washthe best and the longest, as it oughter be.

I forgot to tell you, cur, all about the row pussonally in a quiet way to our mutual beneficial satisfaction. So of you have any sekrets about it. when we, I and the Dook, met John Morrissey and Fernandy and Doolittle and Patterson. We confide in me. Im the hub of the wheel of Stait, cause noos. was a talking and getting along right smartly, and the Dook was a spinning some stiff yarns superstruckture tumble in. I demand a full eggabout his sugar estates in Koolau, and showing planashen from you, Sir! the plans on em, and how rich his kingdom were, and how mity easy it were for a smart man to than any Noo Hempshirt peddler as I ever seed make a tarnel fortin, when J. M. sorter pricked afore, and as soon as he had spoke out he looked his ears up and gav His Hiness a polite invite to tust at me, and then at the marine, and at the come to his rooms and have a game. You should piktures of Farragut and Dave Porter that hang on the wali, as much as to say, "Do you hear hav seed how the Dook at that rose on his toeme?" but all we uns, me and the marine, and nails and stratened hisself upard and backard like till he was moren a foot out the pendickeler, them piktures, looked sorter deaf and dumb-like, and I couldn't hav teebed his nose with a ten-foot and that rather peared to take His Hiness down a pole. Says he, Mr. Morrissey, I thank you, but I peg. Old Welles all that time had bin steddy like looking afore him, and as His Hiness were a aint on that sorter game; and then he looked blue cote with brass buttens, somewhat like a round with his head thrown backard like our old snorting Mustang stud to home at all of us uns, navy blue, (not havin had his reception at Andy, one by one, as much as to say, "Do ye see the you no he was incok,-like yet,) old father Welles Dook." John was sorter struk back at fust, but from looking at the blue cote peared to me riz a his dander riz putty soon and he put his dubled peg or 2, leastways, says he, in a sorter easy and fist behind his back and says he, what do yer short way, Mr. Whats-your-name, I repete what meen by looking that ere way all round and bob- I jist told you, that gunbote of ourn is sent with bing yer ugly smeller at me for? Seeing John's the most friendly intentions, and ef one don't dander riz struck all us uns in a heap like sute we'll send two, for ef thar's many such im- Ship Chandler, Dealer in General Merchandise, Island an electeric flax. Fernandy jumped before John perdent cusses that as you, it'll need mor'n one; and then old Welles slewed hisself round in his to pasify him, I pulled the Dook by the coat tales, arm-chare and went to riting, which I took it Patterson, who was about three sheets in the wind, roled up his sleeves reddy for a fite, and wus an order to get that tother gunbote reddy. the Dook turned as white as a chalk figger head. That took the Dook down a tall peg, I seed by his nose. So I teched him on the elbow, and Fernandy kept a talking mity fast to J. M. about the Dook and His Hiness and strornary envoi, saysi, let's go. The darned marine sorter cockand a tarnel shame, and all that sort a taik, but it ed his eye at His Hiness and opened the door and only peared to make John wurser. What do I guv another slapping saloote, but the Dook took care for his Dooks? Ef he's got the dimes I'se nary notis of it. When we come outside, the got the dollars-and by- I come by em jest as Dook looked sorter down in the mouth. Says honestly as he did. With that he drawed his fist he, Kurnel, that old Welles is either mity deep from behind his back, and says he, and darn it, I or knows nothing. I'm fraid I made a jakass of kin smash in your weepers, and as for your ugly myself. I give in to your pinion, saysi. mug I'll But myself and Doolittle both took His Hiness under each arm and led him the Dook to Bill Seward and Andy. away like a scotchd possum.

When we got outside, Doolittle left us and went back to stop J. M. making sich a infernal noise. Kurnel, says the Dook to me this day, you have saved a kingdom from ruination. I ill make you a nite cummander with a vallyable cross to it, in my military order, ef mi noospaper man-by the by, says he, that same drecktor of my noospaper to hum is a namesake o yourn. Is he, saysi, a ginuine Mumford. No, saith the Dook, he's a Moth. Says i, I thort so; them of the ginuine Mumford's line are too slick to be estehed coming near onto the fire. Sez the Dook, ef mi noospaper to home gives a full count of your service this day, mt Minister of War will soon make you a member of the Orfice of Inspekter Ginral. I thanked His Hiness, and says i, your Hiness as your pussonal aid de scamp, I'm scake the journey, by applying to D. H. Hitch-
